Course Description
With the perceived decline of US hegemony and the spread of violent non-state actors, many new issues have arisen in the field of international security studies in recent years. These include state power dynamics and the rise of China, nuclear proliferation and deterrence, cyberwarfare, military intervention and R2P, ethnic nationalism and sectarianism, state failure and warlordism, and transnational terrorism. In this course we will begin to explore the debates that have arisen over the causes and consequences of these phenomena. Which problems are the most important, and thus the most deserving of attention in a time when budgets are constrained? Do solutions exist? Or is international conflict inevitable?

Student Learning Outcomes
Students who complete this course successfully will be able to:

- Demonstrate knowledge of social science and policy debates about a variety of key issues in international security.
- Demonstrate factual knowledge of selected historical and current cases where these debates are reflected in real-world events.
- Read critically to assess the explanatory value of competing perspectives and theories.
- Apply contending theories to analyze, compare, and evaluate selected historical and current events, in class discussions and written assignments.
- Synthesize facts and arguments across cases in order to reason critically and argue creatively in class discussions and written assignments.
- Find high-quality source material online and in the library, and recognize the hallmarks of expert, objective, vetted analysis.
- Independently design, research, and write a substantial paper of 25-30 pages that explores and takes a stance on a significant debate about an international security issue of the student’s choosing.
Course Requirements

Students are required to attend all course meetings, to participate regularly in class discussions, and to demonstrate through this participation that they have completed the assigned readings before class is held. If a student is not able to attend a particular course meeting, Prof. Marten must be notified in advance if at all possible, and an alternate assignment (for example, a one-page written summary and discussion of assigned course readings) must be completed in lieu of discussion participation for that day.

All written assignments will be submitted on the “assignments” page on Courseworks, which notes time and date of submission. All uploaded files must be in either Word or PDF format. Late assignments will not be accepted, except in the case of a documented family or health emergency (usually requiring a supportive email from the student’s dean).

Twice during the semester, each student will write a short (3- to 5-page) argumentative essay on some aspect of the assigned weekly readings, due before the start of class that week so that the paper is not influenced by our course discussion. A schedule will be circulated after our first class meeting, so that students may choose the subjects and dates of their critique papers.

Each student must also choose one day to lead or co-lead the opening 15 minutes of our class discussion, after Prof. Marten’s introductory remarks. This discussion leadership role will be factored into the course participation grade.

Students will also write a longer research paper of at least 25 double-spaced pages on a topic chosen in consultation with Prof. Marten, due by noon on Tues. April 28. The process of writing this research paper—not merely the final result—is the heart of the course, and students should plan to spend significant time throughout the semester conceptualizing and rethinking the topic and research strategy as the semester progresses. The frustrations of rigorous research are part of the learning experience of the course. Students will turn in a carefully written and preliminarily research topic statement (2-3 paragraphs) for this longer paper by midnight on Monday, Feb. 9, and a research proposal (of at least 3 pages, including a revised topic statement if necessary) with an annotated draft bibliography of at least 15 high-quality sources by 5pm on March 13, before the official start of spring break. (Early submissions are most welcome.) Separate handouts will describe the expectations of each of these assignments.

Senior Capstone Requirement

In addition to the above requirements, all seniors who have designated this colloquium to fulfill their Senior Capstone requirement will be assigned peer partners, with whom they are expected to consult throughout the semester about their major paper assignment. Capstone seniors will hold additional meetings in the instructor’s office (mutually convenient times TBA) where peer partners will discuss and provide constructive mentoring and feedback on the topic statement and research proposal and methods. A portion of seniors’ class participation grade will reflect the quality of their work as peer partners.

Capstone seniors will present their final research papers in class on the last day of class, along with a poster summarizing their research questions, arguments, and findings. A portion of seniors’ final research paper grade will reflect the quality of their presentations. The poster will also be displayed at the senior end-of-year party on the afternoon of Tuesday May 5, 2014. The poster itself will not be graded, but the completion of a poster is required to receive a "Pass" for the senior requirement, and will factor into Departmental considerations for Senior Project Distinction.

Evaluation
- Participation: 20%
- Two short papers: 10% each (20% total)
- Initial topic statement for longer paper: 5%
- Research proposal (and revised topic statement, if necessary): 10%
- Annotated bibliography: 5%
- Finished 25- to 30-page paper: 40%

Barnard Honor Code
All assignments in this class are to be completed in accordance with the Barnard Honor Code, with expectations outlined in the following paragraph. Any student who violates the Honor Code will face dean’s discipline at her or his home college, and will earn a failing grade in the course.

Students affirm that all work turned in is their own, and that they have fully and accurately cited every written source, including web-based sources and unpublished sources (such as prior student papers), used in their writing. Students are encouraged to consult with each other to get feedback as they are writing their major research papers and the intermediary assignments associated with the research papers, but no collaboration is allowed when writing the short papers on the assigned readings. All students receive in-depth briefings on plagiarism and proper citation techniques as part of their introductory days at Barnard and Columbia; any student who has any remaining questions about proper citation technique or about how to avoid plagiarism should discuss these questions and concerns with Prof. Marten before turning in the assignment in question.

Required Readings
All required books have been put on reserve at the Barnard library, and are available for purchase at Bookculture, 536 W. 112th Street.

--Raj Menon and Eugene Rumer, Conflict in Ukraine: The Unwinding of the Post–Cold War Order (Cambridge, Mass.: MIT Press, 2015). Please note: this book is not yet published, but should be available in time for our class in March.

All remaining book chapters will be placed on our Courseworks website under “Files and Resources.” All journal articles are accessible for free by signing in to the Columbia Library Web.
Class Schedule

Jan. 20. How do political scientists study international security?
Please note: students should read these pieces before our first class. Our discussion will focus on alternative explanations for events, different levels of analysis, and cause-and-effect arguments.

Jan. 27. The U.S. role in the world: unipolar dominance or hegemonic decline, and why it matters

Feb. 3. The rise of China: what does it mean, is there a threat, and if so, who threatens whom?

Feb. 10. Research methods session.

Please note: topic statements are due at midnight on Monday Feb. 9, so that we can discuss them in today’s class.

In the first half of today’s class we will discuss causal argumentation, using examples from students’ topic statements. In the second half of today’s class, we will have a library session on finding high-quality source material.
Feb. 17. No class meeting. Prof. Marten will be attending the International Studies Association annual conference in New Orleans. Use this time to work on your research proposal and annotated bibliography, based on last week’s discussion.

Mar. 3. The case of North Korea.

Mar. 10. Cyberwarfare?

Please note: research proposal and annotated bibliography are due by 5pm on Friday, March 13. Early submissions are most welcome!

Mar. 17. Spring break. No class meeting.

Mar. 24. Warlords: challenge to state sovereignty?
--Kimberly Marten. Warlords: Strong-Arm Brokers in Weak States (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 2012). Please read chapters 1, 2, and the conclusion, and then choose two of the four case-study chapters to read in sufficient depth to be able to bring up examples in class.

Mar. 31. Russia and Ukraine.
Apr. 7. Transnational terrorism and states.

Apr. 14. Humanitarian intervention and R2P (the Responsibility to Protect)

Apr. 21. The Future Role of the United States in International Security?

Apr. 28. Senior Capstone research presentations.
Please note: final papers due today before the start of class.
